

FIRST HUNTING CLUB PARTY GETS FULL QUOTA-- The first hunting party to go out for deer on the Ojibwa Recreation Area got their full quota by 8 o'clock Monday morning. These are men who are members or guests of the Ojibwa Hunting Club, and the results of a conservation program by the owners-developers of Ojibwa, plus controlled hunting, show in the reward of this first party to take to the woods there. Throughout this area, in all woods including and also outside the Ojibwa area, there appear to be plentiful numbers of bucks this year, compared to a scarcity last year. The Ojibwa management has a definite feeding and conservation program which it will follow the coming years. The whole Weidman area showed a marked increase in the number of bucks shot early in the season, most of them two to three years old, a good eatin' age and size. Left to right in the above photo: Dale Tilmann, Beal City; Dick Tilmann, Chicago; Marc Meyers, Pontiac; Fev Gatehouse, Beal City; Russell Tilmann, Beal City; Doug Tilmann, Chicago. Not shown was Lou Gray, one of the seven hunters who got the seven bucks.

Owners and developers of the Ojibwa Recreation Area were jubilant Monday as seven members of their first deer hunting party had a showing of seven beautiful six-point young bucks.

"We think this is the only such group in Michigan to fill its quota the morning after season's opening," Richard Tilmann said. He very likely is right. The re

CHERYL VAN SYCKLE, BURL DENSLOW MARRIED

Charyl Van Syckle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Van Syckle of Barryton, became the bride of Burl Denslow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Denslow, last Friday at Barryton. Rev. Andy McNees performed the ceremony.

Their attendants were Dianne Dague and Bryce McKersie.

A wedding reception was held Friday evening at the Rebekah Hall in Barryton, with 200 relatives and friends attending. The couple received many lovely gifts. Punch, cake, ice cream and coffee were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Denslow are at home at their residence west of Weidman. Their many friends offer congratulations.

BUSY BEES CLUB HAS LONG AND HONORABLE RECORD OF SERVICE

During World War I, the women in the Drew area, southwest of Weidman, met regularly to make bandages and do other war work.

Among them were Eliza and Mary Beutler, Fannie Bartlett, Susan Terry, Victoria Merrihew, Hattie Latham, Lura Beutler, Evalena Hibberd, Mary Baker, Jennie Doyle, Sarah Embrey, Luella Pennington, and Jennie Boucher.

So many of their last names began with "B" that they called themselves the "Busy B's."

Their meetings did not end with World War I. In fact, the club meets regularly to this day. The women bought the Gleaner Hall on the bank of the Chippewa, where wedding parties, Halloween parties and even a few funerals were held.

At the time of the oil boom, the lot was leased for oil.

Recently the Busy Bee Hall ownership was transferred to Sherman Township. Major repairs have been made, and again the build-

NORMAN MEAD DIES SUDDENLY

Norman Mead was found dead in his bed by his brother, Linus, Tuesday morning. He had been under a doctor's care for nerves, but had not been known as ill. He was born Aug. 15, 1914.

The two brothers lived alone on their farm two miles east and a half mile north of Weidman, since 1939 when the father, Thomas Mead, died. The two brothers had lived all their lives on the home place.

Surviving are the brother, Linus; one sister, Mrs. Wm. Schafer (Blanche); and two nieces, Sister Josina, a nun in a convent at Wright, near Grand Rapids, and Mrs. James Jarvis of Cadillac; and four nephews, Joseph Schafer, who is custodian at St. Joseph's Church in Beal City; and Herman, Carl and Earl Schafer, all sons of the Wm. Schafers.

Funeral services were arranged for 10 o'clock Friday morning at St. Joseph's Church in Beal City, with burial in the Beal City Cemetery. Rev. Fr. King was expected to officiate.

Rosary services were held Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the Crittenden Funeral Home in Remus, with Rev. Fr. King officiating Thursday evening.

Local Items

Mrs. Minnie Conley remained in critical condition at the home of her son, Fred Wilcox, in Weidman, the first of the week. She was reported Tuesday as some better, but remained seriously ill.

Ralph Wagner of Burkesville, Ky. spent the week here deer hunting. Mr. and Mrs. Wagner were well known residents here up to five years ago, when Ralph retired as an employee of Pure Oil Co. and went to Kentucky. There he has his own drilling rig and is still drilling oil wells. He comes to this area each year for hunting, staying with his sister near Alma.

OJIBWA HUNTING PARTY GETS QUOTA SECOND DAY

sults of hunting on the restricted Ojibwa areas are spectacular.

Doug Tilmann, son of the Richard Tilmanns of Chicago, got the first buck, with Dale Tilmann, son of the Ray Tilmanns, getting the second. All hunters reported seeing an astonishing number of deer in the five-section area retained by the Ojibwa Hunting Club.

This is the second year of deer herd management on the area, the Tilmanns pointed out. Last year they hunted there and got no deer at all. Plenty of does were seen, but no bucks.

They planted oats, rye, and corn last year, and supplied salt for the deer. The conservation program will be continued, the Tilmanns said, and definitely expanded.

"We believe that conservation, that is, feeding, refuge, and controlled hunting, is the answer to the deer herd problem, not doe shooting," Ray Tilmann said.

"Herd control, not indiscriminate shooting, is the answer. And we are going to enlarge and control our deer here. We certainly have plenty of them this year. Next year some wallpapers should be taken here."

The young bucks shot by the hunting club's first party of seven men were identical in size and weight, about 150 pounds each, two-and-a-half-year-olds. These make for the choicest venison eating. Last year these bucks were too young to shoot, and the owners-developers of Ojibwa point out that with their stepped-up program of herd feeding and control, there will be many more bucks in that area even than this year, which is phenomenal.

Hunters in the Ojibwa area are there on invitation only, and each wears an easily-seen white card on the front of his jacket, identifying him as an Ojibwa member or guest. An aerial map in the club office shows hunting areas and the managers of the hunt can advise each hunter of the number of men in any given number of acres, so that there is never a too-large number of hunters in any place.

Plans are being made now to purchase 20,000 rainbow trout fingerlings to plant in Lake Windoga. Another 20,000 fingerlings will be planted in a rearing pond to be transferred into the lakes of the area of the Ojibwa Recreation lands. The young trout will be five to six inches long by next fall, it was pointed out, and will make for good fishing there.

DEER HUNTING VERY GOOD IN WEIDMAN AREA

Deer hunting has been very good so far all around the Weidman area, with several hunters bagging their bucks first thing Sunday morning. Hunting generally was good during the week, with hunters from far and near roaming permission-granted woods (there are still some around here) and seeing many deer and most of them getting their bucks.

Charles Kinsman of Weidman was one of the first, with his buck brought back to town around 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Jerry report in on getting his buck on Sunday morning.

Don Lofgren got a seven-point buck Monday morning.

Elmer Abendroth brought home a nice young buck late Sunday afternoon, brought down in some of our good deer country west of town. He figured its weight at about 150 pounds.

And so it has been going this week. We're sure we haven't a fraction of the hunters hereabouts who got their deer, for there are many. But we did manage to name a few.

Deer license places in this book, containing 20 licenses. Fox Hardware had around 200 and were sold out Saturday. Fox Hardware was getting more in the middle of the week.

All of our news writers have items about hunters getting their deer, and early. We have not attempted to sort out the names and list them separately. But every correspondent had items on the deer hunters, and most of the news stories were of successful hunting.

The season is only started, and the Weidman area has made a remarkable record of success.
