WE FORGOT THE MONDAY HOLIDAY

So we forgot (again!) a holiday falling on a Monday, and last week failed to warn our faithful news writers that no mail would be going out that day (Labor Day).

The dum holidays have been on Mondays during most of this year; and we see by our calendar they will continue so.

Thanksgiving Day is always a Thursday, for which we are thankful. Other than that, we have Christmas this year on Sunday with Monday a legal holiday and no mail going out. New Year's Day following Christmas also will fall on the weekend, occasioning another blackout of news-delivery.

During the past year, for example, Memorial Day was on a Monday, and so was the Fourth of July.

We as a weekly newspaper are plagued by an unco-operative calendar this year.

As usual in emergency, the Messenger's faithful news writers came across with extra effort and got the news in. For some of them this was real effort and some hardship, and we appreciate them more than ever, if possible. (We appreciate them all the year 'round.)

The Messenger telephone was out from last Friday evening till Sunday morning, after lightning storms hit areas from here to Mt. Pleasant and Alma.

Repairmen for the telephone company said Sunday a cable on the corner of Air Line and Woodruff Roads apparently was hit by lightning, though they said it was impossible to pinpoint the exact spot.

Anyhow, it took the Messenger phone, perhaps along with others, out for about 36 hours.

RAY AND LEILA SHOOK--On the 20th anniversary of their ownership of Ray's Shopping Center in Weidman. Leila wears a beautiful orchid corsage, Ray's gift. In the foreground is a remarkable cake by Daisy Embrey which faithfully portrayed the store in details down to "Bologna 59¢" in the windows, and children's dresses on the dry-goods side. Also in the foreground is the large and gorgeous bouquet of flowers the Shooks' children, Judy Krueger and Richard Shook, presented them. The Shooks say they were amazed at the number of gifts, cards and calls they received on their store's anniversary. "We didn't know we had so many friends here," the Shooks said. Around the store were many bouquets from other business places, and from friends. Ray's Shopping Center did its largest volume of business Saturday, the Shooks said.

THE FIRST WEIDMAN DAY

The last Saturday in August, the 24th, 1897, broke warm and clear. People from far and near hustled for town, for there was to be a celebration in Weidman, and the bills advertised an exhibition of a horseless carriage.

Folks had been hearing about these new contraptions that were supposed to run by electricity or gasoline or steam or suthin' or other; but no one hereabouts had seen one. Probably Mr. Weidman had bought one and would show it off on that day.

The business street was lined with booths. The various business places at that time were:

- Ad. Scott, general merchandise.
- John Damon, dry goods, groceries, and drugs.
- George Middlesworth, general store.
- George Fisher, hardware.
- George Drallette, meat market.
- Charles Woolworth, harness shop.
- Peter Aylesworth, hotel and livery.
- William Dawson, shoe repairing.
- Royal Gibbs, hotel.
- Gene Burdick, furniture.
- William Beebe, blacksmith shop.
- Horace Parsons, postmaster

By 11 o'clock the streets were filled with merry-makers, and there were horse-races and various games to attract attention, besides a big midway.

The ball games, which were to be played at later celebrations, were held on the old mill yard.

Among the minor attractions was Okemos, the Indian, who had a flute, and would play doleful tunes, afterward passing the hat. Folks would pay him to have him move on to some other place.

At last it came time for the big event—the exhibition of the horseless carriage. Didn't seem possible one of them there things could run without hosses, but we'll wait and see, anyhow.

At last down the street came John Beutler, walking beside a vehicle in which rode Mr. Weidman. It looked like a surrey. It WAS a surrey, and it was propelled not by electricity, or steam, not by gasoline, but by a yoke of oxen. The marshall of the day, Andrew Cameron of Millbrook, did his best to keep order, but there was considerable tumult as the vehicle passed by. "Just what I expected," said one individual, disgustedly; but the rest took the hoax good-naturedly, and went on with the celebration wholeheartedly.

(The above account is from the Weidman Messenger as put out by Rolla Roe, and the clipping was loaned us by Mr. and Mrs. Carl

Grewett of Mt. Pleasant. (There will be no Weidman Day this year, according to word from the Weidman Business Association, sponsors of the event in modern times.)

WEIDMAN MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1936

Scene in the lumber yard of the John S. Weidman saw mill. This would have been probably in the 1890's, or at latest right after the turn of the century, we figure. Many of us have not realized the vast volume of sawed lumber turned out by the Weidman mills, from logs floated down the Coldwater River from Littlefield Lake and also, we understand, down Walker Creek, into John S. Weidman's mill pond, created for the purpose of holding logs.

The above old photo was supplied Rolla E. Roe's old Weidman Messenger by Ad. Tracy, grandfather of Carl Grewett of Mt. Pleasant. The Carl Grewetts loaned us this old-time material as reminders of Weidman's past.

Prevue of Old Days in Brinton

Editor's Note: This week we give you Tina Mae (Cherryholmes) Jenne's very interesting letter, or parts of it, as a prevue to our History of Coldwater Township.

Fern (Beers) Ellis is working with us on compiling and writing the history, and we expect to begin it within the very near future.)

And now, from Tina Mae:

I was born in Coldwater Township Dec. 30, 1888, and with my parents and the family lived there till the fall of 1898, when we moved north to the city of Cheboygan, Mich., and in February of 1904 we moved west, to the State of Washington.

An older brother, Earl, and a younger one, Perry, were also born in Coldwater Township, Earl at Chippewa Station when that place was an active mill site, and Perry at Russell's Lake at the time L. Russell's mill was running there.

A younger brother, Ronald, was born in Cheboygan.

My father, Cornelius Cherryholmes, who was generally known as Con C. Holmes, was a millwright and cabinet maker, and a member of the IOOF Lodge in Brinton. My mother, Matilda Cherryholmes, was a Rebekah.

In the year 1893, Brinton had between two and three hundred inhabitants. John Meyer was deputy sheriff.

There were, at that time, two hotels, seven stores, a good school house with between 70 and 80 pupils in attendance, or accommodations for that number.

A Union Church, a barber shop, one shoe shop, three blacksmith shops, and a post office with a daily mail. The IOOF Hall had the finest rooms for lodge meetings, and the Maccabees also held their meetings there.

Old Okemos, the Indian from down Lansing way, we found interesting. Not a large or tall man, he was withered of face, brown and old, yet his step was not slow or feeble.

In fancy I can see him now, as then, coming down the hill past the school house with his load of wares for sale: baskets, trinkets, and beads in his pack.

Since he was an Indian, we stayed behind a fence, and after seeing that Baby Brother was safely out of sight, we watched him trudging on down Main Street, and followed him with our eyes till he was lost to view.

(From the Weidman Messenger of April 24, 1958, given us as a souvenir by Ina Gillett.)

ARTICLE ON TRIP TO JAMAICA MISSION

This article is on the trip Rev. Stanley Spires and Steve Johnson of the Forest Hill Church of God, near Weidman, took to Jamaica and the mission field there. As told to this correspondent.

On Aug. 7, after the evening service, we loaded our suitcases in the car and left for Ann Arbor, where we picked up Rev. John Burgess. Then on to Bowling Green, O., where we met Don Foos and his twin sons, Mike and Mark, who are 12 years of age.

We said goodbye to Mrs. Spires and Anna and Rick Johnson, who went along in case of car trouble. We boarded the two buses, which were ready for the mission field in Jamaica, as transportation for the mission schools there.

It was about 1.30 on the morning of Aug. 8 when we started for Miami, Fla. The buses were laden with all kinds of things for the mission field.

Everything was going fine and we were making good time until we arrived in Mt. Vernon, Ky., where our big bus developed an oil leak, causing motor trouble, which delayed us two days. Due to the fact we had plane reservations from Miami to Jamaica on Wednesday, the 10th, we had to send a telegram ahead and make new reservations for Thursday. Again we had to send a wire to the mission field, stating we would be arriving a day behind schedule.

We arrived in Miami around 4 a. m. Aug. 11, and had to wait till 3.30 p. m. for our plane. Once aboard our big Pan American jetliner, we had a very smooth flight. We flew over Cuba at such low altitudes we could observe villages and towns. Rev. Spires remarked at this time it was the first flight he had been on where you were able to do this. All other flights were flown at a very high altitude.

Our flight didn't take long, and in an hour and 30 minutes we touched down in Jamaica. We were met by our missionary, A. A. Amos, our high school teacher, Bonnie Acuff, and two native Jamaicans who came to greet us. After a brief inspection by Customs, we were on our way to an exciting, eventful nine days in the interior of Jamaica.

Here the Gospel Center Association, of which Rev. Spires is foreign secretary, maintains six churches, two Evangelistic Training schools, one infant school and one high school.

Brother Steve was adopted, and given the name of Little Brother, by the Jamaicans. We journeyed on to Clairendon, 90 miles from the main mission headquarters at Mt. Shiloh, where Brother Spires conducted mid-year fellowship for four days with crowds upward from 800 to 1,000 people attending four times a day. At this point Steve's enthusiasm gives way and he tells about the wonderful spirit in the meetings, and the burden he had laid on his heart while there. Steve wants very much to go back as a missionary to these needy people.

He tells with emotion of the friends he made there, one especially, 16 years old, Uland, who would be by him until he would go to bed many nights around the midnight hour, and be waiting at his door on arising at 6 a. m.

He states that when he asked Uland what he would want most for Steve to take back to him from America, he asked for a pair of shoes, stating he had never had a pair.

"I would gladly have given him a pair of mine, had they fit," Steve remarked. And he intends to keep his promise of a pair of shoes when he goes back in January. Uland cried when Steve left for home, hating to lose his new-found friend.

They have in Jamaica 53 young people called "Heralds", who are sternly and strictly supervised, who work constantly for the Lord. Last year alone they held 455 open-air services, 1,000 cottage prayer meetings; they had 675 souls seeking God, 22,185 people contacted personally, and gave out 63,848 Gospel tracts.

Switching the conversation back to the needs for instruments, Rev. Spires remarked he had taken 10 tambourines with him. At one evening of over 800 people they had only one other tambourine, and it was broken. While there, Bro. Spires said, "The Lord laid it upon my heart to try and obtain 100 tambourines by General Assembly time in January of 1967."

These are a very poor people, many walking for miles barefoot to services. They are in great need of clothing, first-aid supplies, Bibles, song books, and any type of musical instrument.

This work was founded in 1956 and is governed by a seven-member American board and a seven-member Jamaican board. It has been chartered through Parliament of Jamaica as a non-profit independent church work.

This is a duly recognized church body in America, United States Headquarters in Weidman, Mich.

Rev. Spires made mention that tambourines can be obtained from a mail order house for $4.50 each. Anyone desiring to help out in this worthy cause may do so by ordering tambourines and contacting Rev. Spires for pickup or send same to Rev. Spires, Box 116, Weidman, Mich., tel. 644-3373.

Receipt will be given for Federal income tax purposes. Rev. Spires is planning to return in January to conduct General Assembly, at which time a goodly number from the Forest Hill Church of God are planning to accompany him on his itinerary trip.

Rev. Spires and Steve arrived at the Detroit Metropolitan Airport at 2.10 a. m. Saturday, Aug. 20. They were met by Mrs. Spires and Anna and Rick. Although tired in body, they were enthusiastically planning their return trip.

Rev. Spires plans to have a missionary meeting this fall, and will be showing films and slides of the field there. We are anxious to see these and learn more about the work there. Rev. Spires and Steve will be in the pictures. This will be announced in the paper when a date has been set.

MIGRATORY BIRDS GATHER AT MOMANY'S POINT

Ruth Momany reported last week that her lawn was literally covered with "dark gray-colored birds," which she was unable to identify.

"I never saw such a gathering of birds here, in the 20 years I've lived on Momany's Point," Ruth told the Messenger.

Monday evening of this week the Skimmers went to see them, and we were also unable to identify the birds positively.

They were a little larger than sparrows, but not large birds. They were gathered, Monday evening, in Ruth's willow trees, from whence she said they fly into the marshes to stay the night.

They were of assorted colors and markings, some all-black, some brownish-gray with what we thought were black bars on the wings. Most of them were of the lighter colorings. Yet there were the plain black ones among them, apparently members of the flock.

George Skinner thinks they are cowbirds, which live and travel in flocks. The cowbird may be migratory, or it may stay in the Great Lakes regions through the winter, according to our bird book.

These apparently were gathering for flight, we figure. The Weidman Pond has been a resting place for innumerable interesting alien birds on their ways to other regions, north in spring and south in autumn.

Ruth's visitors the past week were extremely interesting in their unbelievable numbers.
