CONNIE SKINNER IS A TERROR IN A HOSPITAL

So I fell on my swank carpet Thursday night, July 10, and busted an ankle, but good, landing in CMC Hospital where I drove the entire staff to professionally-controlled distraction.

I demanded innumerable cups of coffee all day, beginning with breakfast; you're supposed to be satisfied with one cup on your breakfast tray.

I was in shock when I entered the hospital, therefore next morning my doctor ordered up "full liquid" diet on my food tray. A "full liquid" diet consists of one teensy glass of orange juice, one cup of coffee, one small carton of milk, and about half a cup of the runniest Cream of Wheat I ever hope to see.

I endured that blasted tray all day Friday--three so-called meals--and when it appeared

HERE'S WHY YOU DIDN'T GET YOUR PAPER LAST WEEK.

So on Thursday evening about 10.30, July 10, Connie Skinner started to walk across the living room to turn off a light, turned her ankle and fell on it and broke two very strategic bones.

Frances Tranbarger took Connie to the Emergency entrance to the hospital, where Connie was fixed up with a splint for the night and put to bed. Next morning x-rays showed a very bad break in the left ankle.

Connie Skinner spent from last Thursday night (July 10) to last Wednesday morning (July 16) in CMC Hospital as a bed patient, with a soft cast on her foot and no getting out of bed.

Sorry about the paper. You'll get it from now on. Your subscription date will be moved forward a week to compensate for the week lost.

But we fully intend to keep the old sheet going.

Thanks for your forbearance.

PAUL LUEDER REALLY GROWS BIG SUNFLOWERS

Paul Lueder of Broomfield has a stand of sunflowers that are a sight to behold, with tall, strong stalks and huge sunflower blossoms right now. Soon they will begin to develop the sunflower seeds.

Paul grows sunflowers--in quantity--every year, to feed birds in the winter time.

We wanted to get out there and get a picture, but we're kind of inhibited at the moment and didn't attempt it the weekend.

Editor's Column

By Connie

again Saturday morning I proceeded to do the unheard-of in a hospital.

I burst into tears. Also I demanded in a loud voice why I got such a thing as that damn' tray, I was starving, I wanted something to eat.

Apparently hospitals can't stand weeping women. Nurses' aides and nurses came a-running and after I'd given them a piece of my mind about the tray, they hastily got hold of my doctor, who said merely, "Oh, I'm sorry, Connie. I just forgot to take you off that diet."

I could have killed him cheerfully, then and there. But thereafter I did get "regular diet", i. e., solid food.

I ran the legs off those pretty little nurses aides, who came and did whatever and never displayed even one frazzled edge of patience. Nurses and nurses' aides were purely wonderful, in CMC Hospital, and I kept them on the jump, complained loudly that, short of a boiler factory, a hospital at night is the noisiest place I ever heard of. And on, and on.

I was a horrible patient, and the hospital staff must have been totally relieved when I got out.

But they couldn't have been half as relieved as I was.

As I tried to tell everyone, my brain wasn't damaged, just my foot.

Now--back on the job.
It's good.

"CANNING LID BLUES"

Oh where and Oh where have the can lids gone?

I need them now real bad.

I am picking string beans by the pailful,

But not a lid to be had.

Kerr says "We work night and day,

"Can't understand why they don't come your way!"

"We work around the clock," says Ball.

Still, stores say, "No lids at all."

I have been to IGA, and Giantway, too.

"Come back Tuesday or Thursday, there may be a few."

My freezer is bulging. I'm ready to shout.

Now all we need is a power brown-out.

In the Editor's Mail

Dear Connie:

I wish for you to terminate the subscription for my aunt, Marie McDonald. I never hear from her at all. The last account I had of her, she was in a nursing home near Grand Rapids, and that her mind had slipped a lot. She doesn't know people part of the time. The paper you sent to her went to her home address and a daughter of hers got her mail and took it to her. The daughter has been in the hospital, heard this a year ago, she was paralyzed on her left side. The only one that could get her mail would be a granddaughter. I have written over there a few times but got no answer. I have been meaning to write you before now, but didn't do it.

It has been quite a few years since we have had as warm a summer as this one, hasn't it? My garden has been doing very well, so have the weeds, too.

Stay in good health if you can, and keep the paper going.

Cordially yours,
Wendell Roberts

OLD FASHIONED WHEAT CUTTING FOR CENTENNIAL

The people of Beal City and its area cut Louis Rau's wheat field Sunday afternoon, in preparation for the threshing bees during the upcoming Centennial celebration.

Spectators lined up cars to the K. OF C. Hall and all over Beal City to witness the old-fashioned binder mow down the wheat in the old way and put it into sheaves.

It looks nice, those old-fashioned shocks of wheat in the field.
